present the wearable 2 metre reminder alert

We aren't elephants, so we will forget...

Keeping two metre social distancing when working onsite, in an office or any other social environment is something that EVERYBODY is going to have to come to terms with as we start the slow 'back to work' regime.

For a long time, it will be essential to keep the right distance and avoid close physical gatherings.

How handy would it be if you had your own reminder awareness system that alerted you if you, or a colleague, had forgotten to keep a safe distance from others?

Well www.keepadistance.co.uk have exactly that solution for you in an easy and affordable solution. Our small, lightweight and wearable tags constantly measure the distance between people, warning them when they get too close one another.

When two tags get below the minimum safety distance, the TAGs vibrate and their LEDs flash, alerting the wearer and those around them.

This will be particularly necessary in places such as shops, business premises, public offices, working/construction sites and all manner of proximity manufacturing.
